- There must always be one important rule to be stacked to and cannot be easily classified.
- So this rule should flash in your mind every time when you get any sentence correction problem and should often be considered when going through practice questions.
- You will definitely fill that way such simple rule cannot ignore while examining available choices because it is easy to focus on the given alterations options and oversee the rest of the world and if you practice grammar rules then choice will be naturally strike in your mind.

Here is example of Sentence Correction question to justify the point:

“Movie coupons will be available from tomorrow, they can be collected during working hours”.

- (A) they can be collected during working hours.
- (B) they can be collected during working hours.
- (C) they can be available for collection during working hours.
- (D) these coupons will be collected during working hours.
- (E) they can be collected during working hours.

Here, B is the correct answer.

The second thing you have to learn is the underlined portion started with a comma and then there's immediately an "they" that we cannot modify.

That means that it's making partition in sentence and it will be just like

“Movie coupons will be available from tomorrow; they can be collected during working hours.”
