

Debate Topic: Working days for Public & Private Sectors Should be reduced to 5 days a week

Get top class preparation for UGC right from your home: Get detailed illustrated notes covering entire syllabus: point-by-point for high retention.

For the motion

- The working days should be reduced to 5 days a week because it isn't quantity & duration of work but quality which matters. When 23 crores of people of America working 5 days a week can make their nation developed; why can't 105 Crores of Indians do that?
- The fact encircles a vicious circle depicting good rest leads to good health which promotes efficiency; improves quality & leads to enhanced output which is the ultimate aim of each sector (Public or private).
- Introduction of technologies (eg. Computers) in nearly every walks of life has to decrease in the work & so, present revelance of 5 days work sounds nice.
- Out of the 6 days a week in present scenario, Saturday remains half day in many sectors. This automatically leads to stagnating situations at weekends & in many cases it remains a mere formality.
- Generally, it is seen that after Sundays, the efficiency on first working day increases tremendously with inborn zeal & diminish. Hence, there can be a second holiday in mid of week to back up & enhance the inner motives of a person.
- Reduction in in days to work is much better than calling them daily inspite of their will & interest, Ordering cups of tea, killing time in gossiping, extending lunch house & many more observations which can be made. The only conservations is increased expenditure of the sector. Where it is difficult to maintain a steady work rate; it appears only proper rest & health can revive their spirits which are a product of increase in holidays.

Developed by: Mindsprite Solutions