

National University of Educational Planning and Administration (NUEPA), New Delhi

The National University of Educational Planning and Administration (NUEPA), now known as the National Staff College came into existence in the year 1960 – 61 due to UNESCO's provision and determination to initiate a center for educational planning and administration in every region of South Asia. India received NUEPA as a result of this decision by UNESCO but then later in 1970, it came under the control of Ministry of Human Resources and Development, Government of India, thereby getting its new name. However now its a totally autonomous body and is also a Deemed University, a status conferred by Ministry of Human Resources and Development in August 2006, for its extra-ordinary contribution in the field of planning, management and capacity building.

Prof Ved Prakash holds the post of Vice-Chancellor in the institute presently.
